Hills Balfour works with the best in the business and we are excited to have the opportunity, in partnership with our sister agencies across Europe, to continue to support Brand USA's mission. As market leaders on the continent, our innovative approach to travel marketing will help enhance the image of the USA in Europe and bring a wealth of new opportunities to partners."

Serena Valle, General Manager for Interface Tourism Italy, adds "I'm grateful for this unique opportunity, which we consider both a great honor and an important commitment. I think representing the USA is one of the best accomplishments we could obtain working in tourism and we take on this responsibility with determination, enthusiasm and humility. As always, we will guarantee maximum commitment with the most motivated and qualified team".

Hills Balfour's Samuel Hancock will act as European Strategic Director within the agency. As an extension of the Brand USA team, Samuel will be responsible for the development and execution of a pan-European strategy focused on driving visitation and revenue to the United States.
